

threw the natives overboard, and fired at them, and immediately weigh'd Anchor. The Depouent saw three of the natives, who had been wounded with small shot by the crew of the Paramatta Schooner. A heavy Gale of Wind coming on immediately which set into the Harbour, blew the vessel on shore between Cape Brit and Terra's district, where the remains of the wreck laid when the Depouent was at Newzealand last March, after the vessel was wreck'd the natives revenged themselves on the crew for firing at them, and demanding them of their Provisions, and cut them all off
