Declaration of Peter Dillon

Mr Theodore Walker being at the Society Islands in the Endeavour at the latter end of the year 1810, shipped on board a native called Tamee commonly known among Europeans by the name of Big Jack. On Walker's return to the Island of Pologa Pologa where I had been put ashore & left, I saw Tamee on board the Endeavour. On my return to Port Jackson in 1812 Tamee came on board the Trial to see me. I ask'd him how he came to leave Walker? He answer'd because he would give him but little for his services — he had made a demand for his services & being refused left the ship for which he was put in jail. After remaining in jail some time where he subsisted on the jail allowance of bread & water, he was taken on board the Endeavour. Not being inclined to work he asked to be allowed to go ashore. Walker said he might but he should not go in the boat. Tamee then jumped
