

cold water for they have no notion of the danger of doing so, and thus hasten their death. When they come to us for relief we cannot turn them away. Since the winter the attachment of the natives towards <sup>us</sup> is more conspicuous. Many of them come upon the Lords Day to hear the service and singing.

I have now received all the extra favours I can wish from the Society. I have only to request that I may have my salary sent out in such articles of clothing and comfort as I think may be needful during such time as it pleases God to give me grace to use my feeble efforts in promoting the great object of the Society. My <sup>(a)</sup>colleagues would I believe wish to have the same indulgence. If they do, it will be much better for our differences & portions to be kept apart. Altho' it will perhaps be attended with more trouble

(a) It is a painful remark that we are no longer acting as a body, Jan. 6. 1815
