our views are very different. It is our duty to watch and pray, for we have a subtle enemy always at hand!

I have written to you respecting my servant Stockwell, and I believe Mr Marsden will also write to you on his behalf. He and Walter Hall the Blacksmith work very hard every day, I should be glad if any thing could be done for them. I just mention them to you, as I know you will be ready to use your influence if you can do it with propriety. Richard Stockwell was tried at Gloucester March 30. 1812. and Walter Hall was tried Dublin in January 1812. —

Mr Nicholas a gentleman who came out as a passenger with me in the Earl Spencer and accompanied Mr Marsden to New Zealand, I expect will shortly return to England. If he does, you will obtain a variety of information from him respecting New Zealand.
