

1a/

There are many thousands who are astonished when they hear of men being sunk into such a state of depravity and degradation.
But the humble Christian who is in the habit of looking into himself well, while he mourns of over the sad effects of the fall, be truly thankful that his lot is far different than that of those poor creatures. There is no remedy of which human nature is not capable since the fall of Man, and it is owing to the merciful interposition of Divine Providence that there is not much more wretchedness to be seen in the world.