

merely nominal, it cannot be expected that my just commands will be always obeyed.
 Besides there are crosses to take up amongst the Nation which a worldly minded man generally speaking cannot, and will not bear, nor will he have recourse to the weapons of the patient Missionary.

Should the Society send out a Smith he must be engaged to act solely for the Society. The Natives will do any thing for a Smith, they therefore be tempted to enter into private trade He will be tried severely if he will prove faithful to the Society.

There will be always a temptation for mechanics and Husbandmen ~~to~~ to save for themselves. Of this you are perfectly aware — I am, Dear Sir Your faithful Servant
 Tho Kendall