

do a few things on account of which I perhaps might pass muster with my religious friends whilst as to the main object I sit still and do nothing. I pray that I may always act with a single eye to the glory of God, and now I am at a distance from my earthly masters I remember that Thou God see'st me.

MS. I do not think it would be a good thing for settlers to bring many sheep, Turkies, or Geese with them at first, especially if they were to fix upon a spot where there were many inhabitants. Ducks and Cocks shew do not so much attract their attention on account of the feathers. I don't think the natives taste any of the latter, at least from me.
