

137

his mind may be expressed more than common, which must be the case at times with him. I forward you a copy of an hasty letter, which I have just written to them as a proxy. but I think a caution from you, will have more weight than any thing I can say. Private Trade will be attended with great evils.
Should it be carried to any extent in the present infant state of the settlement.
They take care never to convey any thing to me: nor do I know what any of them send; as they have always been accommodated with Freight to & from New Zealand in the Active free.
I do not think Mr. Hall has done much but cannot tell. The Principal evil of Trade is, that it creates jealousy. One man who has a turn for Traffic amongst the Natives, will have every