

you to see, as it may be of service to all Societies who wish to promote the Spread of the Gospel amongst the poor Natives in the South Sea Islands - I merely recommend the Societies to unite in the support of the vessel to defray the Expenses to each. I am of opinion that no mission can be established with a Prospect of success in any of the South Sea Islands unless the Islands are regularly visited by a vessel under the Control of the Society - or Societies - merchants in general will be so alive to their own Interest that the mission will always be with them a secondary Consideration - upon what plan the Wesleyan Committee intend to begin their mission in the Friendly Islands I know not. If they establish no regular Communication between N.S. vessels and their missionaries, the missionaries will not be safe.
If they rely upon the merchants at Port Jackson for keeping up a Communication, who have no feeling for the mission, and over whom the Society can have no Control ^{may} evils that they may not be prepared to meet will start up in their way from the vicinities of the Sakers, the Service of the masters or owners did - If the Societies were united in ^{one} the vessel, they would command great means, and great Influence, their very names would awe and check the Spirit of Opposition or Obstacle, which might and would shew itself in this Colony - I only submit these Hints to you - men of more wisdom, and experience may have
