

charged to you in any of your accounts, and you know well that it never was intended, and you cannot show that it was <sup>in</sup> ~~and~~ therefore I do not hesitate to say that your insinuation false and unbecoming - I admit a small bill drawn by Mr King was charged to you by Mr Campbell but not by me; the mistake was rectified the moment I was pointed out - you suffered no loss - and you knew Mr Campbell was a man of such Honor and Integrity that <sup>he</sup> would immediately correct the error - you ask, have you not acted quite as badly by refusing to honor a just bill which I paid for lumber on account of the Society? I never refused to pay a just bill - ~~wrong~~ <sup>the bill is just, and I proved by all the accounts at my</sup> I consented the bill in question was not just - I am not a little astonished that you should mention such a disgraceful business - Shortly after your arrival in New England it was determined your Mr King's bill should be settled at Kiddee Kiddee <sup>among the most valuable timber in the world</sup> you wanted <sup>to show</sup> lumber to build your houses with - a considerable quantity of logs were lying upon the beach at Kanghee Cove - on my inquiring to whom they belonged, Mr King's Mr Hall & King claimed them as their property - I proposed to give them whatever they had given for <sup>them</sup> ~~them~~ <sup>this is one Mr King claims</sup> ~~them~~ <sup>to forward your building</sup> at Kiddee Kiddee - Mr Hall & King agreed to Mr Hall was paid in powder by Mr Marsden. <sup>My</sup> ~~my~~ <sup>proposal</sup> ~~proposal~~ <sup>and I have the accounts</sup> Mr King presented a bill and demand to be paid in money - I told him I could not pay more what this? <sup>in powder for muskets for it was bought with the</sup> the lumber and pay for it in money, it would appear in my accounts very strange to purchase lumber from the others in money for building their own houses with, and I would not set such a precedent, but that Mr King might have payment in any articles he wanted or
