

as far as I know - This is a lamentable circumstance but, can never be remedied in 1814. I was not satisfied with the conduct of young Mr. Miller, and as his father had no Authority over him; I saw great danger from this young man, from the intercourse he had with the natives. and that it was absolutely necessary to take him back with me to Fort Jackson to prevent his own ruin and the consequences that would follow - As a number of Chiefs were returning with me, I thought he would be of infinite advantage to the youths who would live in my house - he might devote himself to the N. Zealand Language while at Parvannatta, and also that I could be of great service to him in improving his mind and giving him instructions for his conduct both in civil and savage society - He was a very uncultivated young man, had been entirely spoiled by his Parents; and under to subjection - After settling all the affairs of the mission, and reconciling all parties, I took my leave of the missionaries
