

9
Service at their command, that I have laboured in their service, that I have sinned in their service, that I have repented in their service, and that I am still promoting according to my feeble abilities, the object they have in view and am still desirous to serve them.

O Ye messengers of Mercy whose robes are washed like mine in the blood of the Lamb: cannot you tell me of the love of that Saviour whose attention was directed, immediately after his resurrection to his unfaithful Disciple St. Peter, and who commanded him before his ascension to feed his Sheep and Lambs. Is there any truth of later date than this. "That he who weeps over his sins, and confesseth and forsaketh them shall obtain Mercy".

Talk not to me about the credit of the Society, that credit is secure: but tell me of my own follies, admonish me and as many of us as have fallen into sin, and run astray from God, to measure back our steps to him by true repentance and return with renewed zeal to the path of Duty. Tell me for I doubt not the truth of it, that the value of the perishing Souls of the poor Heathen weigh more with you than every other consideration: if you say so to me I shall be content. And why can you be so cruel to my large Family, as to withdraw all support from them?
I am now I am confident in the path of Duty and I have been so for several months past, and if I have