

done with me, and will not accept my poor feeble efforts to serve him in this Land of Heathen darkness and ignorance it will soon be seen. If he has more employment for me, he will bring me through my troubles, and more than compensate me for all my sufferings. There need be no attempt on my part therefore to vindicate or conceal such parts of my conduct, as have been wrong, neither need any one strive to mis-construct my professions, or to oppress and degrade me.

O for that spirit which Job manifested when his Eye saw his Lord, O for the disposition of repenting David and weeping Peter, O for a firm patient and persevering zeal to promote the glory of that Saviour, whose property is always to have mercy and who will finally confess those before his Father and the holy Angels who confess him before the World.

I am, Sir

Your Obedient Servant

Thomas Chendall

NB Mr Cavell's moral character is unimpeachable