

shall receive them

signed Sam^l. Marsden

Agent to the C. S. Society

The above may appear arbitrary, and strong injunctions; but I was at a loss how to meet ^{the} evils in any way so as to check them. Perhaps the wisdom of the Committee may form some regulations from them, better suited to the case.

Nov^r. 8 1823

(Encl^d)

Dear Sir

The Bro^r. J. Kendall having repeatedly told me that he has as great a right to be supplied from the Society's stores as any Missionary in New Zealand, it is uncertain what he will do when I am gone, It is probable he may make a demand for supplies should he do this you must object in the first instance to comply with his demand, should he persist in his application, you must then grant him what he wants if the stores will allow, and his paying for it at the price the other Missionaries are charged. If he objects to pay for them and throw out any threat that he will leave them in that case you must yield to his wishes, until you receive instruction how to act. He will not do this unless