

mind, and was anxious to gain what knowledge he could of our laws and Customs. - He was wont to converse much with me about our God, and was very regular in his attendance at Church on the Sabbath; and, when at public worship, behaved with great decorum. - After satisfying his curiosity, he and his friends returned to their native home. -

About two years after Tippahoe departed, the young Chief Duaterra, accompanied by several of his countrymen, came to Port Jackson, which gave an opportunity to me of having frequent communication with this very interesting people. -

The more I examined into their national Character, the more I felt interested in their temporal and spiritual welfare. -

Their minds appeared like a rich soil that had never been cultivated, and only wanted the proper means of improvement to render them fit to rank with civilized Nations. -

I knew that they were Cannibals - that they were a savage race full of superstition, and wholly under the power and influence of the Prince of darkness; and that there was only one remedy which could effectually free them from their cruel spiritual bondage, and misery; and that was the
