

The Reverend Basil Woodd, in his Memoir of Howhee, observes, as follows.

"Our first attention was to procure him board and lodging in a creditable family near the Edgeware road, a few doors from one of the Charity Schools connected with the Bentinck Chapel, the masters of which were requested to pay him every attention in their power, and to take care that he was supplied with whatever was reasonable and expedient, and to be particularly careful of what acquaintance he made.

Having furnished him with suitable apparel, I then sent him to a day school kept by Mr Hazard, a pious and intelligent man, in the adjoining street. - I desired that he might be instructed in reading, writing, and the first rules of Arithmetic; and that particular attention might be paid to his religious instruction.

I especially urged that he should learn to repeat the the admirable Summary of the Divine Law in the Church Catechism in order that he might be thoroughly instructed in his duty to his God and to his neighbours: in humble hope, that through the Divine blessing, he might be brought to examine himself by the Law of God, by that law, might attain
