

I am ^{strongly} inclined to believe and hope that under the blessing of an Omnipotent and merciful God they may ^{will soon be ranked} ever long rank among the civilized and Christian nations of the Earth, if their wants in iron are supplied.

The want of Iron is at present however a great obstacle to their further improvement and without it I fear these people could scarcely rise much above their present situation: but, if means be adopted to supply them with that essential article

Their Country will soon produce to them all the necessaries and conveniences enjoyed in civil Society: - and as such comforts increase, to reward their labour, so will their wants increase to stimulate them to greater industry, and thus lay a solid foundation for their prospective social and mental improvement in the arts.