August 30th 1819. In the morning Korokoro was more Calm, and appeared more reconciled than he had been before. He was very friendly, and expressed his joy with a warmth with which he had spoken to us the preceding evening. We assured him that we would assist him all in our power.
As we had gone down in the "General Gates" to Korokoro's place, where the Master intended to sit out for sea again, we remained on board all night. Korokoro accompanied us with Tori from Ranghee-hoo. As he knew that the vessel would anchor off one of the Settlements, he had given directions to his people, previous to his visit to us, that none of them should presume to come to the "General Gates" till the following day. It was dark when we anchored. We were hailed from shore by one of Korokoro's Officers; when Teranghee answered, and informed the people that Tori was arrived; and gave directions that messengers should be immediately sent to the different districts, to inform the inhabitants of Tori's arrival. A party of chiefs had arrived a few days before, at Wycaddee from the River Thames, by whom one of Tori's Cousins had been cut off sometime before, and they were apprehensive that the father of the young man & Korokoro would revenge his death. Tori ordered a messenger to be sent immediately to Wycaddee, to inform the chiefs that a general pardon would be granted to them; and that, if they thought proper to come and pay their respects to him, their persons would be safe. The next morning the vessel was crowded with chiefs and their friends who came to see Tori. Some wept for joy,
