

After conversing with HorroKoo, I set out for Biddeckiddee, with our new boat, full of scantling-boards for the New Settlement; accompanied by Mr. W. Hall, the three carpenters, and Mr. Samuel Butler. We arrived in the evening, in the midst of a crowd of joyful Natives, who immediately conveyed the timber to a spot where we intended to erect the Public Store, the Smith's Shop, &c. We set the Natives to work, to clear the ground; and then we marked out three buildings: the Public Store, 60 feet, the Smith's House, thirty feet, and his shop, twenty feet, by fourteen.

After the ground had been marked out, I left Mr. Hall and the Carpenters to begin the buildings; and returned, with Mr. S. Butler, in the boat, to Rangheehoo, where we arrived at near eleven
