

1830

57

how far the Skarus extended &c. &c. &c. I informed them that God made all things and that he would at a future day destroy them all again when he came to judge the world. They were much impressed with what I said. Tears stood in their eyes, as they caught every expression I uttered. The works of creation and the future judgment will henceforth be a subject of much conversation with them and their associates.

On one of my previous visits to New Zealand I was sitting one evening in the room where I now am, meditating upon the 7th Psalm, when the natives killed a young woman behind my bedroom as a sacrifice! And she was afterwards roasted and eaten! The natives danced with the most savage den' round the victim of their superstitions. In the morning I enquired what was become of the young woman and they told me with the utmost unconcern, that they had killed and eaten her! I was now astonished to behold the wonderful change that had been effected upon the little spot by the Gospel. Upon this very place where those hellish songs resounded, and Rites were performed, I now hear the songs of Zion, with joy and melody, and the voice of prayer and supplication ascending to the only true God! Many of