

1820 visited Mercury Bay since Captain Cook that I could learn. ⁴⁹
July 21 was an old Chief there whom I saw, that remembered Captⁿ Cook. They are much in want of Tools of every kind, as they are not visited by any Europeans. Supplies for Ships might be got here, as they had plenty of Potatoes and also pork. We inquired after A-wevee from Mr. E-nee-nee. He informed us he was gone to war; but his brother A-wevee was at home. These were my Friend Temmaranga's opponents; who now urged me to see A-wevee, and make a final Reconciliation with him. We had not seen him since the day of Battle. I promised to call upon A-wevee in the morning and hear what he said - which quickened his mind. I asked Temmaranga if he was not afraid of A-wevee taking advantage of him now as he was alone; he replied no - but wished for an opportunity to talk over their past differences, and he thought if I spoke to A-wevee a Reconciliation would easily be accomplished.

July 22 22^d. Early this morning we had a number of visitors. A-wevee came also full dressed with a number of his friends. They all sat down in a Row according to their rank - They were all strangers to me. Temmaranga came and whispered, that A-wevee was arrived and pointed him out. He is a very stout man - well made - was well dressed according to the fashion of their Country; his hair tied up very neat, and he had a Paboo Paboo in his hand about 6 feet long made of the jaw Bone of a whale. Temmaranga requested me to take him by the arm, and walk up with him to A-wevee and tell A-wevee what his wishes were. I immediately complied with his request and we walked up to him. I told A-wevee I had waited upon him to express my own and Temmaranga's wishes, that mutual friendship might be in future established between them, and hoped that he was equally inclined to a Reconciliation - He replied he was very willing to meet Temmaranga upon Terms of Peace. They now talked the subject publicly over - and finally settled that A-wevee should send a person of Rank to reside with Temmaranga; and Temmaranga should send a man of Rank to live with A-wevee. A-wevee then stood up, and made a speech informing the People that there now existed no more differences between the Two Chiefs, and they now sat down together as Friends - A-wevee presented me with his paboo paboo, which I have sent by Captⁿ Downie in the Commodore for the Society's Museum. Temmaranga expressed himself much gratified with the observations A-wevee made in his speech, and they both
