breakers would permit us, and went round the Coves, not being able to cross them, from the adverse wind and Sea. At dusk in the Evening we reached the Bippah where Moyanger resides; a Chief who accompanied Dr. Savage to England about Twelve years ago. The name of the Bippah is Pie-anakka. It stands upon the summit of a very high conical Hill; and is surrounded with water or nearly so at the time of high water. It appeared inaccessible on every side, with the exception of one narrow pass. As soon as the natives observed the Canoe at the foot of the Bippah, they rushed down the pass with their Spears in their hand, as if they were going to meet an enemy. We informed them who we were. They directed us to go round to the opposite side of the Bippah where we could land, and invited us to spend the night with them. This invitation we cheerfully complied with, for we were both hungry, cold and weary. As soon as we landed I was conducted up the narrow pass; which I could not ascend without assistance; the path was so steep and narrow. When I had reached the top; I found a number of Men women and Children sitting round their fires roasting Snappers, Crawfish and Fern Root. It was now quite dark - The roaring of the Sea at the foot of the Bippah, as the waves rolled into the deep caverns beneath - the high precipice upon which we stood, whose top and sides were covered with huts, and the groups of Natives conversing round their fires, all tended to excite strange and new Ideas for reflection. Tho' God has made of one Blood all nations that dwell upon the face of the Earth, and fixed the bounds of their Habitations, yet how widely different is their Situation. It would be difficult to draw a Comparison between the Comforts and enjoyments, mental and bodily, which those partake of who live in a polished Christian Society, and the privations and miseries which those suffer, who live in savage life. With such reflections as these I contemplated the state of my present Society, and sat down amongst them. A woman immediately handed me a Snapper ready roasted, others prepared me some fern root, and being very hungry I relished my supper much, notwithstanding the manner in which it was cooked & served. Moyanger was not at home. I did not know one of the Natives; there was an Officer in Charge of the Bippah who was very kind, as well as all the Inhabitants. They accommodated us with one of their
