is perpendicular next the sea, and from its ^{sight}
height makes every nerve tremble to look down The native path is here and there near the edge I was not able to walk in some parts but crept along on my hands and knees, we got over in about four hours, but with great fatigue.
This Hill may be known at sea by a high Point that stands out at the top like a Horn and overhangs the sea. Its latitude I think will be found to be nearly 38° - But it is not possible to mistake it - It is covered with small Trees, and on that account differs with the other other Hills upon the Coast which are composed of white sand - Having crossed Mangamuc we sat down to Breakfast and then pursued our Journey, in passing along, our party were much alarmed for fear of falling in with any of the Enemy - On one occasion they observed two Men upon a distant Hill which agitated their Minds very much, the Chief urged us to press forward as fast as possible which we did. A few miles further they saw some Men upon the Beach and immediately
