his temporal interest, and lost his rank in Society but this is only the sorrow of the World - His pride is greater, his haughty spirit is more captious, and he is more vindictive than a Man who has never known any <sup>thing</sup> of divine things. He seems to be wholly under Satanic influence, and his last state is worse than his first - I recommended Mr Kendall to be cool, and to consider what he was about before he went too far, but it was in vain to reason with him - I was apprehensive that he would create much mischief in the Mission should it be in his power, by his rash and inconsiderate conduct - He contended the Society were bound to pay him his Salary, and to maintain his family while he remained in New Zealand and afterwards to find him a passage to England I replied if he wanted support for his family untill an opportunity offered for his going to Port Jackson, I would direct his wants to be supplied, but I could only do this on the express condition that he left New Zealand by the first opportunity - He replied with much warmth that he was determined to remain, and would not be driven out of the Island - I used every argument in my power to pacify him but to no purpose - While we were talking Shungee walked into the room - I had not seen him before since my arrival, as he had only returned a few days from the War, and had been out at his farm - I was very sorry that our first meeting should have happened at this unfortunate time, as Mr Kendall's
