

The Brampton accompanied by the Rev. J. Prather Misses Flann & King in order that they might render what assistance they could to the Rev. J.
 Williams in the landing his stores, and securing them on shore - After all these matters were settled, I paid a second visit to the Rev. J. Kendall, and delivered him my public letter, in which I had enclosed the Rev. J. Prather's public letter, and the resolution of the Parent Committee concerning his dismission from the Service of the Society - when I handed him my letter, and communicated to him its contents; he said he would not open it - he was determined to send it home to his friends just as it was - I replied, he would act in that respect as he thought proper - ~~that~~ that as I had acquainted him liberally in what relation he now stood to the Society, it was a matter of little moment whether he opened my letter or not - His conduct had compelled the Society to withdraw its countenance and patronage from him, and there was now an end of their connexion - I informed him that I was authorized to bid him and his family a perpue to Capt. W. J. water and that he and his family could return with me in the Brampton - He still persisted in his determination to remain in New Zealand - I recommended him to consider the subject well - to consider his own situation in the Island, the situation of his large family - the distressing prospect
