

mid

Reasons she gave me - I was much pleased with the whole of her observations - I told her if I found upon Enquiry that what she stated was true I would give her a new gown - while we were talking two other young women joined us - one of them wished to know what was the subject of our conversation - I told her that I had been informed that the young woman went on board a Ship; and I supposed she was one that did so - She replied if I had been told that she had ever gone on board a Ship for improper purposes, I had been told what was false, for she never had. I then changed the third young woman, with doing so, who did not attempt to deny that she had - I was much pleased with the moral virtues of the two first I conversed with - They spoke of such improprieties with more disgust than I could have conceived any woman in their situation could have professed - I firmly believe they said what was true - They desired me to appeal to the Europeans, or to their own people who could confirm the truth of their Assertion - A brother of one of the young women a fine youth died at Annamatta

visit
by
the
conversation

In the Evening I called upon Wyatto, as I could not see him before as he was out at work on his farm - we had a long conversation on the distressed state of New Zealand, in consequence of their perpetual wars - He told me many things that had been stated since his return from Europe that at Munghee's earnest Request he had accompanied him in one Expedition to the River Thames, against Enakhee -