Behaviors
of the Indians

Heathens have behaved well - and have been kind much more kind to the missionaries than some of them have deserved - Mr. G's poority were left under their protection during his absence in England, and ~~was~~ they were very attentive to it - There is nothing to prevent their conversion, but the want of proper means - good and faithful missionaries God will never bless that man whose heart is full of lust and pride, and envy -

It was my intention to have returned to New York to day, but could not do on account of the stormy weather I therefore spent the day with the Rev.
H. Williams - I am at a loss what to do with the Rev. J. Knapp - He cannot remain in the mission unless he proves his own I have ever been persuaded, since he landed in N. England that he is a man totally unqualified for the work - His violent temper carries him beyond the bounds of decency, and not only endangers his own life, but the lives of his colleagues - He never will alter his conduct - His habits ~~are~~ <sup>have</sup> become fixed, and can not be only speaking even be eradicated - How happy shall I be to see the day when the missionaries have live like brothers, and construe the Heathens to say see how these Christians love At present I hear little from the natives but complaints against the missionaries for their quarrels & disputes
