

would not, before he ventured to call for an Enquiry - I consider him a ruined man - God permits men to fall into sin, and covers them with shame to humble their pride, and to subdue their evil passions - Should divine goodness keep this awful event to his soul, he may become a new man - I hoped Mr. B. will be the last, who will disgrace the mission - There has been vast sums expended of money expended on, or by the Rev. J. B. which have not as yet turned to much account - He has laboured hard, in his own way; but unfortunately, not for the Honour, and general good of the mission - His conduct towards his Colleagues has been very unpleasant, and distressing to them - His removal from New Zealand will be a great relief to the minds of those who are heartily engaged in the work -

^{Nov 7th} I left by sea for Kidder Kidder, with an intention to return the following morning, in order to be ready to embark - on my arrival I found it would be necessary to settle many unpleasant circumstances that had occurred lately before I took my final leave of Kidder Kidder - Thonghee and all the Chiefs with most of the inhabitants were gone to the River Gambier, in order to remove the bones of four of their relatives to the Parity Sepulchre.
This is a very great religious ceremony - The people assemble from all parts on such occasions.
The funeral orations are spoken when all the great deeds the deceased have done, and the virtues they possess are recited - If my time would
