moment in the dusk of the evening I arrived safe at Plymouth and in about an hour after my arrival Mrs Williams was safely delivered of a little boy. She had had a very easy birth. The Lord is good and merciful and present help in time of need, and never fails them that put their trust in him. I have never seen of strong faith, and I no idea of fear. I am now for her present satisfaction - happy and content at 11th I have been busy this day in transcribing the public and have also written my last public letter to the ^{Examiner} ^{Public} ^{Account} ^{of} ^{the} ^{missionaries} as it is said the paper will sail to morrow - I hope when we do sail we shall be more successful than we were in the Prompter - God had some wise ends to answer in the loss of that ship many changes have taken place since that event, which I cannot doubt, will prove out to the permanence of the Gospel - when the Prompter was wrecked I had not seen Munghee, and many other Chiefs - they had not returned from the war - since then every necessary arrangement has been made with them to my satisfaction. I should have left the Rev. G. P. but for some reason, and I do not believe he would have altered his conduct, which might have ended in something very serious. Tho I have spent a very anxious time in Fetland, yet I leave it with full confidence that the mission will prosper. I have no doubt but the help of those who accompany me will be with greatest good - when missionaries will not duty, it is the wisest way to remove them they weaken the hands of those that are faithful, and by throw difficulties in their way, and set up hindrances to the Gospel -
