of those arts.

His disposition is kind & amiable. His integrity I think unquestionable, & his natural character altogether good & interesting: but a divine grace has done much for him. He is one in whom the marks of the new creature are distinct & clear - such as may be known & need full who were acquainted with him both before & since his conversion.

Mr Knott has seen him I believe in Norwich. I ought to add in conclusion that I think very highly of him. He has not only active virtues but possesses those of a less common character, & would be likely, in my opinion, to make an excellent support of all that is

Believe me My dear Sir
