

capacious Moral, sufficient to accommodate both himself and her - I expressed my astonishment that he should totally neglect the Schools, and provide such Buildings for himself and her, and told Mr Butler I did not know how he would account for his Conduct to the Society. Young Mr B. and his wife have neither of them any religious feeling, and totally unfit for the work of the mission - Mrs Butler Senior is a very laborious worker, but ignorant, and came out against her will, that much could not be expected from her as a missionary's wife.
In the midst of all these unpleasant circumstances I was greatly at a loss what to do: or where to begin to remedy these evils - I saw there was no remedy but their removal: and how to accomplish this I did not know. I considered Mr Butler more dangerous to the mission, from his violent temper, and neglect of the Schools than Mr Kendall; because he possessed Authority and governed the other missionaries, while Mr Kendall had no power. It was in vain to look for any reformation in him for his habits were fixed
